

TO SAVE JOSEPHINE'S HOME

Ex-Empress Eugenie Gives Harp of Napoleon's Concert Toward Rehabilitation of Malmaison.

Paris. — Malmaison, the famous chateau with which the name of Josephine is so romantically associated, has been completely restored to the condition which obtained during the days of the empire, and will be opened to visitors on the first of May.

Every effort has been made by M. Ostris, who has superintended the work of restoration, to make the chateau as like as possible to what it was in the days of the first empress. M. Ostris has spent large sums over what has been to him a labor of love, and the result is most successful. Now the work of providing the historical mansion with some of the furniture with which it was formerly stocked, and with other articles in harmony with that period, has been begun.

Empress Eugenie, who has displayed great interest in this restoration, has promised her assistance, and pending the conclusion of a selection has offered Josephine's harp, which will soon be on its way hither from England. The National Garde-Meuble is also in possession of various articles which belonged to the empress, or which embellished the residences of her husband, the first Napoleon. Some of these are to be pressed into the service as well, so that when everything is in readiness in May the spectacle thus presented will be extremely effective and instructive.
